XPath Evaluator: node-based operators & path functionality For a presentation I'm working on, I've been asked to do something that I don't think I've ever had to do before: I've been asked to create a set of nodes that corresponds to the nodes in an XML document. Basically, what I'm tasked with doing is to be able to take an XML document, and turn that document

into another XML document that has essentially the same structure as the original (same nodes, same attributes, etc). Now, this is something I've only been able to accomplish with the use of XSLT, but the lady in charge of my project asked me to find out if there was a way to do this with XPath...and I'm the kind of guy who tends to do the dumb stuff first, so I thought I'd see if it could be done without passing parameters, to see if there is a way to accomplish this type of task using only XPath... So here's the problem: She's asked me to generate the nodes based on the source document. The catch here is that the source document has several hundreds of nodes, so I don't really want to spend all day going through and building all of these nodes by hand. So, what I figured out is that I'd have to write a few functions to basically build a tree of nodes and "voila," the "new" XML document would be built. Unfortunately, XPath's Path functionality doesn't allow the creation of custom operators that are node

G++ is a free implementation of the ISO/IEC. Both are based on the SRFI-47 code. In the 1990s, K&R C. and its legacy, it is # g++ not #gcc. In other words, $ /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as. $ ll /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as ... $ file /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as: symbolic link to `/etc/alternatives/as' Which is a symlink to /bin/as. Let's check how the symlink is set up: $ /etc/alternatives/as . $ /etc/alternatives/as ... /etc/alternatives/as: symbolic link to `/usr/bin/as' and $ type /usr/bin/as /usr/bin/as is a shell script. Let's check how that path to /usr/bin/as is set up: $ /etc/alternatives/as -f /usr/bin/as: symbolic link to `/usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as' and $ type /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as: symbolic link to `/usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.4.0/as' So the system knows you want to use /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.0.1/as, which is a symlink to /usr/libexec/gcc/i686-linux-gnu/4.4.0/as. You now have a version of GCC that has been built with the C++ standard libs. It works, in theory. In practice it does not really. It can
